

Any rule requiring written consent before faxing to a business should exempt job applicants and their agents. The recent rule and order of the FCC, regarding this subject, will be interpreted to require job hunters (who are advertising their services) to seek written consent before faxing a resume. This was not the intention of any Telecommunications Act passed by congress and would place undue hardship on job hunters including subjecting them to victimization by unscrupulous attorneys.